

GET LOST IN HAWAII

AS THE HIT ABC DRAMA DRAWS TO A NAIL-BITING END, GET IN ON THE ACTION WITH A TRIP TO OAHU

The luxe Turtle Bay Resort is a paradise for Lost fans.

The Turtle Bay Resort's unspoiled beach has become one of Lost's most iconic locations.

It's been six years since Lost began filming on the Hawaiian island of Oahu. Now, just weeks away from its dramatic May 23 finale, the end of Lost doesn't have to spell the end of the adventure for fans of the show. The fictional island's real-life counterpart is just a six-hour flight from L.A. Still home to a number of Lost cast members, Oahu's tropical landscape is packed with locations from the show's 121 episodes. The island's cosmopolitan city, Honolulu, is also worth exploring, with spots like the Lihua Bakery (lihabakeryhawaii.com) and Chinatown's Indigo restaurant (indigo-hawaii.com) featured in Lost's famous flashback scenes.

SLEEP ON SET!

From its pristine beach to its scenic golf courses, the Turtle Bay Resort is one of Lost's most recognizable locations and virtually a second home to the cast. "They were a gem to work with," says Turtle Bay PR manager Keoki Wallace. "Terry O'Quinn [John Locke] would walk around with his guitar, just singing to himself." Look for the Banyan Tree, where many forest scenes were filmed (turtlebayresort.com).

Zip through the Ka'aawa Valley with KOS Tours to see spots like Hurley's golf course (below).

DO A LOST TOUR

Join KOS Tours for a Hummer ride around some of Lost's top locations, including Papa'ioa Beach, where the *Lost*ies set up camp, and YMCA Camp Erdman, better known as the Dharma Initiative's Barracks (hummertourshawaii.com). Or, adventurous fans can get an aerial view with The Original Glider Rides, overlooking sights like Mokule'ia Beach, where the castaways first crash-landed (honolulusoaring.com).

Follow in the castaways' footsteps by taking a dip in the Waimea Falls.

SEE MORE SIGHTS

Deep in the gorgeous Waimea Valley, an 1,800-acre historical park, you'll find the amazing Waimea Falls, a recurring landmark where Kate and Sawyer went swimming and Hurley crash-landed back onto the island (waimeavalley.net). Then seek out serenity at the Byodo-In Temple, the tranquil Buddhist shrine where Jin and Sun's Korean wedding was filmed (byodo-in.com).

Sun and Jin wed at the Byodo-In Temple.
